2/26/2014	LE intake with [REDACTED]	[REDACTED] is an Environmental Education graduate student, who began a 1 year residency at the [REDACTED] in September. After a "hands to work" meeting, she went down the stairs and noticed a slippery area (it had been snowing), which she pointed out to [REDACTED], [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] walked up behind [REDACTED] and said "did you say intercourse me, did you say fuck me?" She responded without standing behind him, saying "You can't say that to me," and she kept walking. She does not believe she heard him wrong. She has not had much interaction with him since. [REDACTED] spoke with [REDACTED] immediately afterwards, she is also a graduate student. And she emailed [REDACTED], graduate program coordinator, to say she was going to seek an emergency counseling session. [REDACTED] had informal interactions with [REDACTED] earlier and had no idea he had interest in her. She had gone to him and his wife's house for dinner, and had

		gone snowshoeing with him. [REDACTED] teaches yoga to him and his wife at [REDACTED] house. The only other time they had an uncomfortable interaction was at [REDACTED] in [REDACTED] when watching a football game. He was drinking scotch heavily. They were sitting on couch a fair distance apart, another person came and was going to sit in a chair. He said we can make room and he said, "come here babe." And reached his arm out as if to put it around [REDACTED] [REDACTED] wants to approach [REDACTED] herself and see how that goes. She will come back to EO if she has any future concerns. Laura and [REDACTED] talked about safety planning.
